

SITE LAYOUT SYSTEM

Minimalist Research + Artist Portfolio Architecture

1. Core Page Types

1.1 Homepage

Purpose:

- Introduce the person behind the work
- Provide conceptual positioning (research + artistic practice)
- Offer immediate access to CV and projects
- Showcase selected work

Key Elements:

- Hero introduction
- Primary actions (View Projects / Download CV)
- Featured projects
- Social links

1.2 Webpage (Project / Post / Publication)

Purpose:

- Long-form reading
- Research documentation
- Case study or artistic project presentation
- Publication or essay presentation

Characteristics:

- Single reading column
- Media integrated into narrative
- Clear typographic hierarchy
- Minimal distractions

1.3 Navigation

Navigation contains only three items:

Home
About
Projects

Design Rules:

- Minimal navigation to reduce cognitive load
- No secondary navigation bars
- No sidebar navigation
- Clear hierarchy between pages

Navigation Behavior:

Desktop:

LOGO + Horizontal navigation

Tablet & Mobile:

LOGO + Hamburger Menu (Overlay Navigation)

2. Content Organization

2.1 About Page

Purpose:

- Provide background and context
- Present professional and artistic identity
- Offer downloadable materials

Content:

- Portrait or profile image
- Short biography

- Research interests or artistic statement
- CV / Resume download
- Optional portfolio download

The CV is not a navigation item but is accessible via:

- Hero CTA on homepage
- Download link on About page

The About page provides context about the person behind the work.

It should answer:

- Who are you?
- What do you research or create?
- What is your background?
- How can someone contact you?

It also hosts downloadable documents like:

- CV
- resume
- portfolio PDF

2.2 Projects Page

Purpose:

- Central archive of work
- Host all creative and research output

Projects include:

- Research projects
- Artistic works
- Publications
- Essays or blog posts
- Code snippets
- Jupyter notebooks
- Media documentation

Filtering System:

Content Structure:

- Tag filter bar
- Grid of project cards
- Each card links to a full project page

2.3 Project / Post Page Layout

Project pages include posts, research documentation, blog entries, Jupyter notebooks, publications, etc Project pages are designed for long-form reading and documentation.

They should support:

- research explanations
- artistic documentation
- technical walkthroughs
- essays or blog posts
- embedded media (video, images, notebooks)

Key Design Principles:

- Single-column reading flow
- No sidebar
- Content-driven layout
- Media integrated into narrative

Project pages may contain:

- paragraphs
- images
- figure captions
- block quotes
- video embeds
- code blocks
- Jupyter notebook output
- diagrams
- tables

Example content sequence:

Intro

↓

Context

↓

Process

↓

Documentation (images/video/code)

↓

Results / Reflection

This works well for research documentation and artistic process writing.

6. Page System Summary

The site consists of three primary page types:

Page	Purpose
Home	Entry point and featured work
Projects	Archive of research and creative output
Project/Post	Detailed documentation or article
About	Biography and professional information

Navigation remains minimal:

7. Design Principles

1. Minimal Navigation: Only essential pages appear in the navigation.
2. Single Column Content: No sidebars are used to maintain visual clarity.
3. Work-Centered Design: Projects and research outputs are prioritized visually.
4. Tag-Based Organization: Projects are grouped using tags rather than complex navigation hierarchies.
5. Responsive First: Design adapts smoothly across devices.
6. Clear Entry Points: Hero provides two primary actions:

View Projects

Download CV

7. Typography Over Decoration: Clean typography and spacing drive visual hierarchy rather than heavy graphics.
